

Rusty Mill Distillery

Whisk(e)y is made in a drawn out process taking 2 to 8 years, with very traditional methods and ideas. What if you could produce a superior product in a fraction of the time? What if it could be done better?

Our trade secret allows us to produce a smooth mellow Whiskee (the spelling is correct as 'Whiskee'<sup>TM</sup>), which has been sampled by an official Scottish whisky taster and a whole lot of people with no great claim to fame:

'First mouthful, solid but not aggressive hit with peat and salt nose – alcohol mostly, not unexpected. Second mouthful smooth, diminishing peat, salt, increasing vanilla, caramel and small undertone of aniseed. Would drink all afternoon as opposed to two to three nips of Jamison's and then stop due to increasing dislike of continual 'sharp' hit'.

Our secret lies in the ability to produce that taste and advantage comes with the fact we can do it at very low production cost. It comes to you directly from the distiller and has not languished in a bonding warehouse developing a bitter after taste.

Our blend of commercial technology and bespoke systems give more than a taste advantage for our Young Oak Whiskee and single Malt Whiskee.

Our liqueurs are another story again. We can produce a Whiskee liqueur, Honey Whiskee liqueur, Maple Whiskee liqueur, Ginger Whiskee liqueurs (40% ABV). We are experimenting with native botanicals like Redback Ginger and Anise Myrtle as liqueurs and plan to produce a complementary sweet line.

We plan to expand our range using locally sourced fruits from the Darling Downs. More than that we can create regional secondary employment in native botanicals. By sourcing locally, we generate addition income for fruit and berry growers, through producing products from 2nd & 3rd grade produce, better known as the ugly fruit.

Company

Rusty Mill Distillery is located on the Darling Downs in Queensland and is scaling up infrastructure to enable production on a commercial scale. Like all small business we are starting small and hope to build a loyal following of discerning consumers of quality spirits.

What's the Difference Between Whiskey, Whisky and Whiskee?

You see the name of the liquor spelled both as "whiskey" and "whisky?" No, it's not due to a spelling error or typo. It is generally spelled "whiskey"—with an e—in the United States and Ireland. It is spelled "whisky"—without the e—in Scotland and Canada, which are both well known for their whisky, and in several other countries.

Since we are Aussies, we like to 'Cooee' to friends and say have a Whiskee with me.

'Cooee, Whiskee'

The smooth taste of the Australian country, flies and bulldust optional extras.
